1 Coral Branch Necklace

Kelly Horrigan (B.F.A. Fashion Design '98),
Adjunct Professor of Fashion Design
$245

Horrigan's bold handmade statement jewelry exemplifies her one-of-a-kind aesthetic: lending experimental touches to old-world techniques. This long-hanging necklace is made from branch coral accented with antique brass hardware, sandcast coral, beads, and repurposed leather fringe. Available at kellyhorriganhandmade.com.

2 Silk Scarf

Emily Kulwicki (B.F.A. Fashion Design '06)
$72

Kulwicki is the owner of EMKY, a made-in-the-USA fashion scarf company. The company's scarves feature one-of-a-kind prints and original artwork and are designed to be tied in multiple ways. This semi-sheer scarf is made of 100 percent silk chiffon and features a boldly colored abstract flower print with chevron-print borders. Available at emkyshop.com.

3 Kaufmann Gathering Bench

Evan Dublin (B.I.D. '09)
$1,395–$1,499

As design director for the Kaufmann collection of Kaufmann Mercantile, an online store that specializes in elegantly crafted home essentials, Dublin designed this classic two-person gathering bench. Made to order from solid black walnut wood with a black walnut or black leather seat inlay, the slim bench makes a perfect addition to any entryway or hallway. A mineral oil and natural beeswax finish ensures that the bench will age beautifully. Available at kaufmann-mercantile.com.

4 The Counterfeit Detective

Paul R. Paradise (M.S. L.I.S. '02)
$14.90

Paradise's latest book is a mystery thriller based on his expertise on the subject of trademark counterfeiting and his research on private investigator David Woods. Paradise brings together family secrets, betrayal, and murder in the tale of a New York private investigator who infiltrates an interstate counterfeiting ring. Available at amazon.com.
